"No, there is nothing alarming in our diplo matic relations with Italy. The flurry over the New Orleans trouble seems to have subsided. Indeed there was never much agitation over there about it. The Italians do not get as excited as we do here. They take things much more calmly and placidly and I do not believe that they make as much noise. This is contrary to the general belief, I know, but it is nevertheless true. They are hot blooded, to be sure, and they will fight at the least provocation, but they don't got excited about it. Now, all during that very unpleasant controversy there was never the slightest affront to me or any of my household or staff. I went abroad at all hours unattended and I encountered nothing but the most polite courtesy. They are very polite people, the Italians, and this is true of all classes. They seem to make that an aim of life, and I am sure that I shall never run across a pleasanter population to live among. PLEASANT RELATIONS IN HOME.

'My relations with the government at Rome are peculiarly pleasant and they continued to be so even when our papers here were printing the most warlike news and comment. The Marquis de Rudini"—Gov. Porter pronounced the name in the Italian fashion, with the ac-cent on the first syllable—"is one of the most courteous men I ever met, retiring and modest, almost diffident in his manner, yet a strikingly and-ome man. There is the greatest difference imaginable between the personalities of the two prime minis-ters, Crispi and Rudini. The former is a giant in intellect, a man of intense force and strength, whose very presence inspires one with awe, his face stern and full of purpose, and yet with eyes that sparkle with good nature and geni-ality. The Marquis de Rudini, though a man of great ability and character, is mild and CRISPI AND RUDINI CONTRASTED.

There can be no greater contrast presented than in the way in which these two men receive their diplomatic visitors. Crispi sits at a desk with his eyes on his papers, his head bowed, and apparently oblivious of all else than the documents before him. The door is opened by an attendant and a minister is admitted. He walks across the room and even to the edge of the premier's desk before he is noticed. Then, as soon as he has come within reach, the premier rises quickly and grasps his caller's hand. The interview is pleasant and the minister feels that he has been fairly heard.

The premier lets him say all that he has to tell, but with an art that allows no time to be asted. When the interview is over the premier says good morning rather abruptly, shakes hands and thenceforth the guest is forgotten apparently. The statesman shead is once more buried in his papers and he is scratching away rapidly with a pen, making a note of the min-ister's words. He utilizes every second, and before a new caller is ushered in the mission of before a new caller is ushered in the mission of the former one has been formulated, given to a clerk and started off on its rounds. "The king is very much like Rudini in his manners, simple, unaffected and courteous, a man of men and a splendid fellow, too. He is fairly idolized by the people, and his popularity is richly deserved. He drives abroad frequently and bows to all who bow to him, taking off his hat necessarily and smiling right and left. The queen, too, has a graceful way of acknowledging salutes with a sweet smile that renders her very beautiful. Their little son, the prioce is

"Italy, like all European nations, has her squad of republicans, who make a great deal of noise and keep up a constant agitation, drawing moise and keep up a constant agration, urawing most of their strength from the working classes. But they do not aim at the foundation of a republic—the kingdom is too popular for that. They strive for broader principles of administration, wider methods of representation and a more liberal form of government generally, Yes, of course the international strain in northern Europe has an effect upon Italy, but she does not want any war. STORY OF AN EARTHQUAKE. "We were in Verona on a short visit and were to leave at 5 o'clock in the morning. At 3, when we were in our beds, an earthquake occurred. I felt the movement distinctly. It was not what I had expected of an earthquake in the least. I had always imagined that it pro-duced an up-and-down or an undulating motion, whereas this one was a sharp, jerky movement laterally, from side to side. It was so violent as almost to throw me from bed. traveling with me, reached the room and advised me to go with the rest of the party to the public square, where the population of the city was assembling, for the return shock would probably be more severe the first one. So we went into the prazza, which was y crowded with people of sli there was not the slightest sign of excitement. The return shock did not come, for some reason or other, and by 'tne along as usual and there was no sign of an earthquake beyond a few fallen chimneys. The same disturbance destroyed several villages just outside of the city."

The bureau of American republics has reeived a very important report upon commercial and industrial opportunities offered in the republic of Mexico. In the textile industry there is great demand for women's scarfs and shawls, counterpanes, toweling and napkins, though there are in abundance excellent fibers ever since it was presented. for his nome in Indiana tonight.

He chatted pleasantly for half an hour or for this industry. The mills of the country an increased cost of 300 to 400 per cent due to tariff, freight and other charges. The estab-lishment of factories near the forests and railroad lines would prove an exceedingly remun-erative undertaking. The abundance of water Vienna, is in great demand by the middle classes.
Ceramic and crystal articles produced are generally very ordinary. This industry is highly projected and the raw material abounds.
Though sulphuric and nitric acids, &c., are much required there are in Mexico only two chemical lactories. The creation of new fac-tories, favored by an abundance of raw ma-terial, cheap labor, high protection and a large population, would prove a paying investment of capital. Machinery for the establishment of factories is free of import duty. Mining and agricultural operations offer a profitable but less certain field for investment.

Recent investigations as to the resources of the Sotavento district in the state of Vera Cruz, Mexico, have developed the fact that the uncultivated lands are of great fertility and adapted for extensive agricultural enterprises. valuable fiber plants for textile fabrics and the manufacture of paper. The soil is in parts especially adapted for the cultivation of coffee and for growing cane and tobacco. Agricultural labor is pientiful and wages range from 37 to 50 cents a day.

MEXICAN FISH CULTURE.

Good Results Accomplished From Material Furnished by the Fish Commission. Senor E. Chagari, in charge of fish culture in Mexico, has received several well-known kinds announced the results of his operations in a recent letter to Commissioner McDonald. In December, 1885, a small lot of carp wa obtained. These spawned in 1889,1890 and 1891, and their product now number from 15,000 to 20,000, some of them weighing nine or ten pounds. The first public distribution will be made this winter. Cold water has greatly retarded the development of carp in the Mexican establishments.

Lake trout eggs, forwarded in 1890, vielded a small number of fish, which have proved very delicate in the region and grow very slowly. Rainbow trout eggs, sent from California in 1888, furnished about 5,000 young. These trout developed rapidly, and among them are fish measuring twenty-eight inches and weighing nine pounds, while their average weight is fully two pounds. In December, 1890, the rainbows yielded 50,000 eggs, from which were developed 25,000 healthy fry. Brook trout obtained in March, 1889, have given poorer results than the rainbow. The females were full of eggs in December, 1890. but no males entered the spawning races, and the fertilization of their eggs with milt of the rainbow produed no result.

Quinnat or California salmon have proved better adapted to Mexican waters than any other of the family. About 9,000 young, hatched from eggs received in October, 1890, have reached an average weight of three ounces and their condition is thrifty. Red-eyed perch, owing to the coldness of the water in which they are kept, have not spawned, and the fish received in 1889 weigh "The present premier, however, meets his

An Epidemic of Smallpox. Surgeon General Wyman of the marine hospital service has received a letter from the governor of Georgia calling attention to an epidemic of smallpox on Harris Neck, Liberty county, Ga., twenty miles north of Da-rien, and requesting that the marine hospital service take charge of the epidemic, as there is no organized board of health in Lib-erty county, and Harris Neck is remote from the county seat. The country there is populated chiefly by negroes. The surgeon general immediately sent telegraphic orders to Surgeon J. H. White, in charge or the U.S. quarantine station at Biackbend Island, Ga., to visit the infected locality and begin measures at once to stamp out the disease.

While all agree that promotions should be regulated by uniform examinations, they are not unanimous as to the methods to be employed. There has hereto-fore been the greatest and widest variety of systems in vogue in the departments, antipodal conditions being presented in the Post Office and treasury, and it has been mainly the object of the civil service commission to amalgamate the best features of all systems into a parmonious plan applicable to the entire government, or at least that part that is under the rules.
